ATLANTA (April 21, 2009) – AdvanceMe, Inc., the nation's leading provider of Merchant Cash Advances, will be showcasing the company's momentum over the past year at this year's Electronic Transaction Association (ETA) annual meeting in Las Vegas. Despite the overall decline in national economic conditions, AdvanceMe has experienced continued growth and interest in its funding product, a Merchant Cash Advance, and continues to expand the way the product is distributed to the small business market. In the two most recent quarters of 2008 and 2009, AdvanceMe secured, developed and extended valuable referral relationships with transaction processing industry leaders including TransFirst and Elavon.

Elavon, a global acquiring solutions organization, part of U.S. Bancorp, will also launch a co-branded marketing campaign with AdvanceMe designed to create awareness of a working capital solution with its U.S.-based merchants needing alternative sources of funding. Elavon provides end-to-end payment processing services to more than one million merchants in the United States, Europe, Canada and Puerto Rico.

"Due to our focus on customer service and customer-centric portfolio management, we can continue to provide money to small businesses through robust partnerships with the strongest, most influential financial institutions, despite the current economy," said Glenn Goldman, President and Chief Executive Officer of Capital Access Network. "We are continuing to grow and foresee increased expansion into new markets and with additional partners. By mid-2009 we will reach the 1.5 billion dollar funding benchmark, validating our product and our support for the small business community when these owners need it most."
