

CAPITAL ACCESS NETWORK LAUNCHES NEW WEBSITE

SCARSDALE, NY (April 2009) – Capital Access Network Inc. (CAN), parent company of AdvanceMe, Inc., and a leading provider of financial solutions for small businesses today announced the official release of a newly redesigned corporate website.

This new website is designed to better address the needs of many potential users, including small business owners seeking working capital options. The site provides corporate information about CAN and its subsidiaries; press releases and industry news; access to survey results, business tips, links to relevant sites, white papers and other resources; and will also allow for an interested business owner to complete an online application for working capital for their small business.

Capital Access Network recognizes small business owners' growing need for access to reliable information on a range of topics such as business management and financial options and services. The new site continues Capital Access Network's decade-long merchant-centric focus while improving both the user experience and the depth of resources, information, and news relevant to the questions and issues faced by the small business owner.

"CapitalAccessNetwork.com is another great way for small business owners to read and review pertinent news and information – information that can make a notable difference within a small business," said Glenn Goldman, chief executive officer of Capital Access Network, parent company of AdvanceMe. "Keeping a modern small business competitive is more challenging today than ever before. Owners need to be learning all they can about their options and opportunities. Our newly redesigned corporate site will help to keep small businesses informed and up-to-date with relevant news, tips and resources that will have a positive impact on their business."
